HRC INTERIM MANAGEMENT

About Interim Management

Interim management has been implemented effectively in a variety of job functions within companies that span various sectors. It provides the temporary management resources and skills for both short or long-term projects to manage a period of talent shortage, crisis, change or transition within a company.

Value Proposition

- Return on Investment - paid on the delivery of goals and objectives not simply attendance
- Speed - in place within days as opposed to weeks or months
- Expertise - Skills and experience to address a specific gap
- Objectivity - provide a fresh perspective and will look at what is best for the business
- Accountability - Interim Managers expect to be held accountable for results
- Effectiveness - distinct from a 'Temp' they are there to affect change or transition in a company

Why Hire An Interim Manager

In today’s uncertain economic climate where innovation is critical for survival, companies need to have access to experts who can tackle these tough objectives and effect considerable change.

The challenges faced by businesses can be numerous and very busy periods of the year. Interim Managers are paid based on results. The allows companies also to easily calculate their cost of hire.

When To Hire An Interim Manager

There are a number of business situations which may require senior level experience and management with a clear strategy to improve performance. Some common scenarios in which interim managers can be an ideal solution include:

- During a time of crisis to turn around a failing service or business to offer expertise to a challenged management team
- To provide a company with breathing space during the recruitment of a permanent executive
- To cover for maternity leave or other absences
- During particularly busy periods of the year
- Business process improvement
- Unexpected departure or resignation

A FLEXIBLE RESOURCE

As independent consultants, Interim Managers offer a cost-effective alternative to the commitment of hiring a permanent employee with full benefits package. This is especially beneficial during a recruitment freeze.
